From Vice-Chancellor's Desk

Dear Readers,

Majority of the world's poor people live in rural areas, and most rural people depend on natural resources for their livelihood. Agriculture, animal husbandry and other natural resources are vulnerable to even slight change in climate and season. Increasing urbanization, industrial developments, deforestation, nuclear explosion etc., are some of the reasons of climate change. Due to change in climate, emergence of new diseases or outbreak of many viral as well as bacterial diseases is being noticed, which ultimately affect survivability of livestock and human beings. Recently, humans suffered from outbreak of Covid-19 which adversely affected not only world economy but human health too. In 2022, we faced the challenge of Lumpy Skin Disease in Cattle in some states including Rajasthan which adversely affected reproduction and production in cattle. As a result of which whole milk and milk production chain was disturbed, which is yet to be smoothened? Although, to control the disease and mitigate the adverse effects, Government adopted many preventive measures but these seemed inadequate. During the period RAJUVAS constituted teams of experts to assist the State Animal Husbandry Department and suggested several preventive measures, which included vaccination and treatment of affected animal. Farmers were motivated and made aware about this outbreak through farmer advisory centre and goshies at village level. Government of India and State Government have recognized the laboratory of PGIVER Jaipur as diagnostic centre for lumpy skin disease and other zoonotic diseases. To ensure human and animal health, we should ensure that ecological disturbances are not created and adopt all sorts of steps to conserve our natural resources so as to minimize man-made havoc which affect natural setting of eco-system.

With all good wishes
